WATERCOLOR BRUSHES

These Red Sable brushes, which tend to "swallow" more color and less water and whose fine tips enable the work to be signed, provide more relief, greater contrast and intensity thanks to their resilience. The Squirrel is soft and flowing. They are used very wet. The extremely tight packing of the hairs enables the liquid to be easily absorbed and to produce long strokes on paper, without the need to return to the color palette.

WATERCOLOR BRUSHES

These Squirrel and Red Sable brushes are extremely fine and soft and fold under the slightest pressure from the hand, fanning out, giving a broad stroke and returning to their initial positions whilst retaining a perfect point. Using the Squirrel, which is a real water reservoir, allows you to place the subject into its context. The expressiveness of the Sable brushes means that they take more color, less water and offer greater relief and intensity.
